

Climax, Falling Action & Resolution

Topic

☐ Personal: Write a story about a time when you were excited.

OR

☒ Creative: Write a story about a character who was excited.

End Requirements

1 Continue writing with the same point of view.	3rd person-outsider he, him, his, she, her, it, they, theirs, them
2 Use dialogue to emphasize the climax.	Evo is nervous about the roller coaster, but makes a decision to ride it anyway.
3 Use transition words to support the sequence.	after, soon, then, suddenly
4 Write a conclusion that reflects on the main character's experience.	Evo loved riding on the roller coaster.

End

After the friends got off the spinning cups, they made their way across the park and back in line for the roller coaster. "I am nervous, Bit. I don't know if I can get on this ride," whispered Evo. "It can be scary trying something new, but it'll be fun! I will be next to you the entire ride," replied Bit. Evo took a deep breath and thought about how disappointed it would be if it left the park without going on the roller coaster. This was an opportunity it didn't want to miss out on. "Alright, Bit, let's do this," declared Evo.

Soon enough, Evo and Bit were buckled in the third car of the coaster. As the coaster began to move slowly towards the top of the track, Evo was amazed at how much it could see, even the tea cups. Suddenly, the coaster took off quickly as it dropped! "Ahhhhhh!" yelled Evo. Evo felt itself move with the force of the ride as it flipped upside down, turned right, moved upwards, dropped again, turned left, and flipped upside down two more times. Before Evo knew it, the coaster came to a stop. Bit looked at Evo and asked, "Well, what did you think of your first time on the roller coaster?" "That was awesome! We should get back in line and ride it again!" Evo replied with a big grin.

