Back in the days when animals could talk, two neighbors stood at the fence chatting.

Turtle asked Horse if he could give her a ride to the market. He agreed and they set out across the wide green field. As Horse wandered slowly along, Turtle quickly grew anxious and asked Horse if he could run, or skip, or fly because she was in a hurry. As Horse began to run, he heard a heavy stone smash loudly to the ground. Turning to look, he found that it was Turtle, not a stone. She was okay and lying upside-down on her shell happily looking at the fluffy, purple clouds. Horse carefully turned Turtle right-side-up. She asked if Horse had seen the fluffy, purple clouds. He answered, "I was wandering slowly so that we could enjoy them." Then Turtle realized that Horse was wise. They again wandered slowly, enjoying the fluffy purple clouds all the way to the market.

The moral of the story is take time to enjoy the journey of life.
